

Osamuyia sells comics and newspapers to support himself and his family. He is quite happy as this way he meets lots of people every day.

One day, the militia fighting the government reached Osamuyia's city. Many of the fighters were kids.

Osamuyia and his family are very scared and had to pack everything in a rush and leave their home, their city and his beloved newsstand.

Like them, many others had to leave behind their home and possessions hoping they will find peace in a neighbouring country. The number of refugees in 2008 was more than 37 millions all over the world.
